U. S. USES "BIG STICK" IN NICARAGUA

TO PUT DOWN UPRISING OF REBELS IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Senator Borah Asks Secretary of State For An Explanation—Idaho Senator's Feathers All Ruffled Up Over the Situation—Mexico Has Her Back Up Also—Strong Opposition Crops Out Among Officials.

Strong opposition to American armed intervention in Nicaragua at Washington developed in official circles Sunday.

Senator William E. Borah, Idaho, Republican, chairman of the Senate Foreign Affairs committee, will demand an explanation from the state department. Unless there is complete justification he will head a movement for an investigation when the senate is reconvened, he said.

In the meantime the "big stick" apparently was being silently but diligently wielded to crush the Nicaraguan revolt and continue American domination there as opposed to Mexican influence.

Concerning the movement of American cruisers up and down both coast of Nicaragua and the landing of blue-jackets in at least three places, the state department had nothing to add to previous dispatches.

Confidential advices indicate, however, that the "Constitutional Government of Dr. Juan Sacasa, recognized by Mexico, has been "bottled up" temporarily, at least.

This was accomplished by the landing of bluejackets at Puerto Cabezas, Dr. Sacasa's capital, and declaring that place to be a neutral zone. It prohibits possession of any arms within a prescribed area, measured by rifle shot range from any American interests there. It also serves to prohibit the shipment of arms into the port and three cruisers are there to see that none come in. These are the Rochester, Denver and Cleveland.

While Dr. Sacasa has control of the entire east coast of Nicaragua, he now is cut off from munitions. The Liberal leader established himself at Puerto Cabezas as the only remaining port which was not being controlled by American forces. Sailors previously had been landed at Bluefields and Rio Grande.

One report from Nicaragua made public by agents of Dr. Sacasa have declared that he had been forced to leave Puerto Cabezas and take his "government" with him. His representative fear this has taken place, because they have received no word from him since Friday.

In all statements to date the state department has declared that this government would not intervene in Nicaragua and that troops would be landed only for the protection of American lives and property.

This was given as the reason for landing sailors at Puerto Cabezas, Dr. T. S. Vaca, representative of Dr. Sacasa declared, however, there are no American lives and property there. The state department has declined to make public the names of American citizens making an appeal for protection which preceded the landing of sailors.

Hernan Robleto, under secretary of education in the Nicaraguan opposition liberal cabinet of Dr. Juan Sacasa Sunday challenged the truth of

DEATH OF SAMUEL ROSEN.
Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Topolosky were called to Columbus today by the death of Samuel Rosen, a former resident of Mingo street, this city. The deceased was 75 years of age. He died Sunday.

the report of Real Admiral Latimer that American citizens and commercial interests of Puerto Cabezas have appealed for the protection of United States marines.

Rear Admiral Latimer has landed a guard of sailors and marines at Puerto Cabezas, the seat of the Sacasa liberal government and has ruled that all of the liberal troops there must disarm or leave the port, Puerto Cabezas was declared to be a neutral zone.

Under Secretary Robleto, who is in Mexico City, said the only American company in Puerto Cabezas is the Brogman Bluff Lumber company, which has been friendly to the Liberals and is not afraid of "Sacasa's Revolutionaries."

Robleto emphatically denied a statement attributed to former President Chamorro, of Nicaragua, that a secret treaty exists between Mexico and Dr. Sacasa. He said the charge is part of the plan of the Conservative President Diaz and Chamorro to foster the prejudices of the American department of state regarding the alleged interferences of Mexico in Nicaraguan affairs. Their aim, he said, was to obtain material American assistance.

AUTOMOBILE RAN OFF ROAD WOMAN HURT

A colored couple riding in a Ford coupe on the Columbus pike on their way from Columbus to Gallipolis were upset just as they reached Scippo bridge Friday evening. It seems that a northbound bus hit a Buick car just before the Ford arrived. In order to pass the wreck the colored man drove too close to the side of the roadway and his car went into the ditch. He escaped injury, but his wife was not so fortunate as her right forearm was broken in two places. She was brought to this city where she was given first aid by Dr. O. H. Dunton and her husband took her to Grant hospital Columbus.

FIRE SUNDAY EVENING.

The fire department was called out Sunday evening about eleven o'clock to the home of Robert Zwicker, corner of Elm avenue and Corwin street. A sill over a fireplace had caught fire from an overheated stove. The loss was small.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus—Plans were made today for entertaining Howard P. Savage, national commander of the American Legion who is expected to visit Columbus January 15.

Cleveland—An attempt to poison a family of four was discovered when Marie Peck, 14, bit into a piece of candy from a box left at the Peck home. Marie in biting into the candy discovered a small tablet concealed in the piece and warned others. The tablet contained poison an investigation showed.

Zanesville—Charles D. Fraunfelter president of the Fraungelter China company here died of double pneumonia. He had been failing for two years.

Cincinnati—Rex Fowler shot December 22 in an argument over kissing Leona Wade died of his injuries. Arthur Wade, who shot as a result of the argument is still in a serious condition.

Columbus—Five thousand Ohio teachers will meet here tomorrow for a two day convention. Financial support of the weak school districts and other legislation will be considered by the convention.

Columbus—Regulation of the diet of prisoners in the Franklin county jail will be undertaken by judges of the common pleas court soon after January 1, according to an announcement by Prosecutor John R. King, who becomes a judge at that time.

WINTER WARDROBE.

The last word in men's winter apparel was displayed by an unknown individual in Ashtabula recently. The outfit consists of a pair of shoes.

According to reports at police headquarters a tall, slender man, minus all clothing except a pair of shoes, ran amuck with a knife terrorizing the entire district. He was reported several times but police were unable to locate him. It seems that he braved the wintry blasts for two hours, chasing several women and boys.

However, police believe that his unusual antics will be discontinued in the future, as there will be officers posted in the vicinity of his activities.

FIRE CHRISTMAS EVE.

The fire department was called out Friday evening to the Crist Brothers building. Soot in a flue caught fire and the sparks falling on the roof made it appear as tho the building was on fire. There was no loss.

WILDER STORE WAS VISITED BY BURGLARS

Failed to Get Money From Safe But Took $4.00 From the Cash Register.

The safe of Wilder's Cash store was tampered with Christmas Eve and the knob and combination were knocked off. The burglar failed to get inside the safe which contained a considerable amount of money, but he took about $4 in change from the cash register.

Mr. Wilder worked until a late hour Saturday evening and before leaving looked after closing all the shutters in the rear of the store, and also locked both front doors securely. There are no marks on the windows, shutters or front door to show that the burglar had gained entrance from the outside and it is thought that he hid in the interior and started his work after Mr. Wilder left. In leaving the store the marauder opened a window and the shutters and made his get-away. It is thought that if this is the fact that Mr. Wilder was in the store for several hours with the burglar.

The safe and contents were insured in the Boyle & Johnson agency.

Ray White and Lawrence Johnson worked the combination to the safe shortly after they were called to the store.

CARELESS THIEVES.

Thieves are becoming more careless every day. However, William Gersmeyer, of Cincinnati, who doesn't know whether to feel happy or said, wishes they were more so.

Two men came into his tailor shop and asked him to press their trousers. While he was engaged in the task they pilfered $150 which they found in the sleeve of an old coat. Now comes the cheerful part, they failed to find $150 more which was concealed in the other sleeve.

Paying for the pressing, the thieves resumed their apparel and left the shop. Gersmeyer discovered his loss later.

YOUNG MAN ENDED LIFE BY HANGING

No Good Reason Can be Assigned For Rash Act of Francis B. Lowe.

The body of Francis Bartley Lowe cold and stiff in death, was found in the printing office of Miss May Lowe on the third floor of the Odd Fellows block Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock by his brother, John W. Lowe, and his cousin, William Clark.

How long he had been hanging is a question as his body was cold, and coroner Dunton when called pronounced the deed a suicide.

His mother, Mrs. C. F. Lowe, called Miss May Lowe Monday morning and asked if she had seen her son, Francis as he had failed to come home Sunday night. The young man had been in the habit of staying at the office late and after doing a printing job, would stay a few hours to read. Miss Lowe burned natural gas in her office and his mother was afraid that escaping gas may have suffocated him.

She sent her younger son, John, and his cousin to the printing office. They forced the door and entered in a rear room and found the body which was later taken down by Coroner Dunton and Dr. Simkins.

man's body was taken down by Coroner Dunton and Dr. Simkins.

Francis Bartley Lowe was born in this city June 27, 1904. After graduating from the public schools he attended Berea college for one year and attended several military training schools. During the preliminary work on the Chesapeake & Hocking railroad, he was employed as an assistant rodsman and for the past six months, he had been employed as an assistant in the cashier's office at Ft. Hayes, Columbus. He was well liked by his companions and was to go to a government accounting training school at Washington D. C., in the spring and later was going to the Canal Zone. He joined the regular army a year ago and was placed in the clerical department and assigned to Ft. Hayes.

Besides his parents he leaves two brothers, John W. Lowe and Thomas Wheeler Lowe and one sister, Mary Jane Lowe. His father is employed as an accountant in the main office of the American National Fire Insurance company in Columbus.

The last two evenings Mr. Lowe had been down town and apparently was in a jovial mood, happy and contented. His parents have the sympathy of the entire community in the tragedy that has fallen in their family circle.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

NONAGENARIAN

Mrs. Clinton L. Lee Died in Columbus—Funeral at Williamsport.

Eliza Jane Lee, widow of Clinton L. Lee died at the State hospital, Columbus, Friday morning at 4:20 o'clock and the body was removed to the Hill Funeral Home in Williamsport where the funeral was held Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock Central Standard time, conducted by Rev. W. W. Trout. She was the youngest of a family of ten children and was born near Bourneville, Ohio, August 29, 1837, and was the daughter of Daniel and Barbara Toops Recob. On October 22, 1867, she was united in marriage to Clinton L. Lee, who died March, 1923. She was a member of the Williamsport Methodist Episcopal church. Interment in Forest cemetery.

Mrs. Bess Henderson and daughter, Ruth, spent the day in Columbus.

TURKISH PROGRESS IS BLOW TO CZECHS

Abolition of Fez Hits Important Industry.

Washington.—When news reached the world that Turkey had abolished the fez it created mild interest.

That is, the interest was mild in nearly all the world except in a little Czechoslovakian village in the Bohmer Wald, where it stirred up amazement instead. Now the people of Strakonitz have protested against Turkey's abandonment of its traditional headgear because it cripples their industry of supplying fezzes to Turkey.

"The predicament of Strakonitz (the Czechs spell it Strakonice) affords a telling cross-section of Czechoslovakian industry," says a bulletin from the headquarters of the National Geographic society in Washington.

"Long before Czechoslovakia became an independent state it had the habit of making things for other nations. When the buying power of Europe shrank after the war, Czechoslovakians were forced afar for markets as they never were before. The 'Yankees of Europe,' as they have been called, have been doing business with the 'Yankees of America.' What woman is not familiar with Czechoslovakian glass beads from Gablonz, with Czech embroidery and Bohemian glassware?"

"Strakonitz, Gablonz, Kladno, Pribram, Brunn and other manufacturing towns are in the western end of the country. Czechoslovakia, at first, seemed an awkwardly long name, but it helps one remember the geography of the nation. Czech is a short, compact name, and likewise the western, or Czech, or Bohemian section, is as compact as a box. Slovakia stretches out on the tongue and geographically tapers out along the Carpathian range like a scarf trailing behind the Bohemian box.

"The edges of the box are mountain ranges and Strakonitz lies near the south wall. Another way of giving its position is to say that Strakonitz lies half way between Ceske Budejovice and Pilsen. A still better way is to say that it lies half way between Budweis and Pilsen, for the German spellings of those towns are far more familiar to an American than the Czech spellings.

Volstead Act Grieved Pilsen.

"The sorrow caused Strakonitz by the Turkish edict against the fez is a drop in the bucket beside the grief Pilsen faced because of the United States' declaration of prohibition. Pilsen's municipal brewery is the largest in Czechoslovakia and one of the largest in the world. Its product goes to nearly every land. This brewery is a community project operated by a few hundred house owners of the town.

"While the textile industries, including the hat making of the Strakonitz district, are extensive, even a slight inquiry into the Czechoslovakian trade reveals that Bohemia is especially dedicated to beverages. First there is Hana (Prossnitz) in Moravia, between Bohemia and Slovakia, famous for its barley malt, which is shipped all over the world. Then there is Saaz (Zatec) in the far west of Bohemia, famous for its hops, which are shipped to Pilsen and to Germany. There also are the numerous breweries. And finally there is the extensive glass industry centered in Gablonz (Jablonec) for fancy ware and Teplitz (Teplice), Prague (Praha), etc., for plainer ware.

"Pilsen, Strakonitz and Budweis are also within the chief health springs district of southern Bohemia, one of the most famous of Europe. In past ages the country was liberally sprinkled with small volcanic peaks. Volcanic activity has survived only in the warm health springs, such as Karlovy Vary, better known as Karlsbad, and Mar Lazne, better known as Marienbad."

America's Golden Rule Gir!

MISS BETTY COMPTON of New York has been selected in a national competition to portray the spirit of the Golden Rule in connection with the forthcoming observance of International Golden Rule Sunday for the Near East Relief.

Expect Sixty Countries to Observe Golden Rule Sunday

MORE than sixty nations throughout the civilized world are expected to join in the observance of International Golden Rule Sunday this year, according to Gordon L. Berry, Executive Secretary of the International Near East Association, under whose auspices the day will be celebrated.

Originally intended to promote peace and better understanding throughout the world and to attract world wide attention to the situation in the Near East, where American and foreign philanthropy are caring for an army of war orphans, the day this year will have the additional purpose of aiding victims of the earthquake in Armenia, a large number of them children now under the care of the American Near East Relief.

On Golden Rule Sunday people throughout the world are asked to serve in their homes the simple meal of a Near East Relief orphanage and then to contribute as generously as their means will permit to relief work and child welfare work in Bible Lands. The children thus cared for are being trained as apostles of a more peaceful world.

Reports submitted to Mr. Berry indicate that last year fifty-one nations joined in the observance of the day. Official sanction to the idea in this country was given by the endorsement of President Coolidge and abroad by rulers, statesmen, and diplomats.

The appeal for aid to children in Bible Lands has received a universal response in all civilized countries. Practical application of the Golden Rule is the sole purpose of the observance. Golden Rule Sunday will be celebrated everywhere as a day of self-sacrifice and kindly thoughts toward children in distant lands.

Thousand Eat Golden Rule Meal At Gathering of New Yorkers

MORE than a thousand leaders in religious, social, civic and political circles in New York sat down to the "Golden Rule Dinner" at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York which recently opened the campaign for the fourth annual observance of International Golden Rule Sunday in the United States.

Clergymen of all faiths and some of the leading philanthropists of the nation participated in the program. Girls from various New York and Brooklyn colleges served as waitresses and not a dish was broken—most of them were made from old condensed milk cans especially for the dinner by boys in the Near East Relief training school on the island of Syra, Greece. They were similar to the tableware of the orphanages.

The menu served was meat stew, macaroni and cheese, stewed apricots, with syrup, bread and cocoa. This is the fare served daily in the Near East Relief orphanages abroad at a cost of approximately four cents a meal.

Golden Rule Sunday this year will have added significance since about it will be built a nation wide campaign for one million dollars to aid the victims of the recent earthquake in Armenia and to provide funds for the maintenance of children in the Near East Relief orphanages until June.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK

CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO

"The Bank That Makes You Feel At Home."

Welcome Ostrich Boa in All Former Glory

Yes, we are wearing ostrich boas again and we are going to carry ostrich fans, too, for fashion so decrees. As to the boas the mode sends word that they are to be as popular for daytime wear as for evening. Especially is the seal of approval stamped on the short ombre, beige or black boa as a finishing touch to the street costume. The new gold ostrich and the pastel colored is reversed for formal occasions.

Furthermore, ostrich is trimming the latest millinery, also used for shoulder bouquets, is heavily bordering the evening wrap and gracefully embellishing the delicately tinted chif-fon dance frock.

Small Hats Favored by Women Who Follow Mode

Small hats with high, crushable crowns in felt, velvet or velours are considered the smartest headgear for the season. Occasionally we see a wide-brimmed velvet model, but these do not seem consistent for the sleek, boyish head which is decreed by Dame Fashion.

Colors in millinery, like colors in costumes, run to black, browns, chanel red, jungle greens, valencia blue and orangeish nasturtium shades. Trimming is the one thing which distinguishes the new bonnet from those we have been wearing. Where the simple ribbon crown band was formerly used we now find bands of leather and fur trimming most of the smart shapes.

The fur or leather crown band merely replaces the ribbon band. Bands of pony and short-clipped calf fur, often finished with straps and buckles of leather, are used in single or narrow double band effect. The Russian inspiration is found on some turbans where fur forms a wide front bandeau which comes to a high peak in front.

Changeable velours is a new millinery idea which was recently brought out in Paris. The blending of two colors gives a two-tone effect that permits the hat to blend with different costumes. Many different color combinations are to be found in the millinery shops. The ribbon trimming these two-toned felts is also changeable.

Satin and felt is a millinery combination often used this year. Perforated felt posed over satin foundations is among the novelties.

Crowns of most hats drape higher at the rear than at the sides or front and when brims are worn they are narrow, short and flexible.

Rubber flowers are a new millinery idea that is carried out on the hat for rainy days. Many smart women choose rubber flowers as boutonnières.

Winsome School Frocks Made of Sheer Fabrics

While schoolgirl fashions are of necessity simple in line and trimming, their chic is undeniable. This autumn, as in the summer, sheer materials are used extensively in the fashioning of frocks for the girl of school and college age. Chiffons in pastel or brilliant colors, tulle in striking color contrasts and lace dyed to match the shade of the frock itself are chosen for youthful models that are as charming and smart as they are simple.

Tulle frocks, while not so practical as those of chiffon, are exquisite. In the wardrobe of a schoolgirl is a delightful little frock, which has a skirt composed of alternate flounces of black and white tulle. The waist is of white taffeta.

Mussolini Coat Draws Attention of Women

One of the dress sensations at the Goodwin races was a powder blue cloak, much the same color that Italian officers wear in their dress capes. It was worn by an exquisitely dressed woman who was a stranger to London society, but rumor has it that the coat was made by Mussolini's own tailor, and modistes who have imitated the coat are calling it the Mussolini coat and predict it will be a popular garment.

KRISS KRINGLE GAVE KIDDIES A HAPPY TIME

Community Tree at Court House Attracted a Large Crowd Christmas Eve.

Christmas in all its glory was duly celebrated in the churches and homes of this city. The celebration started with that of the community tree at the court house, where a crowd of children estimated at fifteen hundred were given a royal treat by the American Legion. Some 960 sacks were distributed, the bags containing candy, oranges, apples and nuts.

Rev. Emil Toensmeier gave an address before the sweetmeats were distributed. He told a story of a little boy, who was unselfish. This lad was seeking gifts for a crippled boy, but was asking nothing for himself, and on Christmas day he was given an armful of gifts. L. J. Johnson, E. C.
Ebert, Joseph Lynch, N. G. Spangler and Harry Timmons assisted in the distribution.

The character of "Old Santa" was taken by Fred C. Clark, who made a most wonderful "Kriss Kringle," and was admired by the thousand and one youngsters, and was cheered lustily when he made his appearance. "Santa" made a neat little speech and told the "kiddies" what the day really meant and what it stood for. Most of them just thought it was a day for giving presents but it is really a good will celebration said the speaker and is the anniversary of the birth of our Savior. Following the address of Santa, the youngsters were made glad by the presentation of the sweetmeats.

FOOTBALL IS NOT A GAME OF TIME

Coach Would Decide Games
by Number of Plays.

"Football is not a game of time any more than baseball," said Reginald W. P. Brown, assistant coach of football of Boston university. He expressed the opinion that fixing the time of a game by plays rather than by the watch would materially regulate the forward pass.

Coach Brown tried out the play system in several of the Boston university games last fall and this session, and is thoroughly convinced of its success. In his statement, he said that members of the football committee had been invited to these games but that none had attended.

"The game of football," he said, "is a game of plays—four downs to gain a specific distance. It is not a game of time any more than baseball.

"The rules committee had administered playing football by plays for six years, and this year made it optional with the teams. This is on record, although it is not in the book.

"I claim football by plays will materially regulate the much discussed forward pass, as by time the incom-pleted forward pass stops the watch and thereby extends the actual playing time about 30 seconds, while by plays the incomplete forward pass counts a play. This is a big difference and it stops the dragging out of a game.

"Teams can go from the time game to the play game or vice versa with practically no inconvenience, as the execution of the plays is unchanged.
It does away with all inaccuracies of the timing.

"All that is needed is some good-sized numbers such as basket-ball numbers and the words 'More plays.'"

Coach Spears Hits Golf

Ball Placed on Watch

When Dr. Clarence W. Spears, head football coach at the University of Minnesota, has a new play which he wishes to experiment with, he simply tosses 11 of his men out on the field and has them test it out, by using it in a scrimmage with another group of players. But when it comes to experimenting with golf—a sport which has taken most of his spare time during the summer months—that's another story altogether.

The Minnesota coach was displaying his skill at golf before a number of friends on a Twin City course, and being especially confident of his ability to handle a club, he began to demonstrate just how an expert golfer was able to tee off the face of a watch with the crystal up.

He took a "hefty" swing and the ball went sailing into the air, but so did part of the watch.

Champion's Odd Career

Mrs. G. Henry Stetson of Philadelphia, new woman's national golf champion, did not start playing golf until the elder of her two daughters was seven years old.

In the dozen years that have elapsed since then, although the schooling and care of these two daughters kept her out of all but two national tournaments, her game became steadily stronger and it was ready when the daughters grown, she had the chance to enter again this year.

PRINCESS MEETS ROMANCE IN U. S.

Ileana of Rumania Twice Met Her Prince Charming, West Point Adorae

New York.—Ileana, princess of Rumania, met a Prince Charming on the first days of her arrival on the shores of this democratic land.

It is a modern fairy tale with all its whimsical, romantic settings, only in this case the tale is true.

The story begins soon after the arrival of Ileana with her mother, Queen Marie of Rumania, and her brother, Prince Nikolaus. It will be remembered that one of the first of the series of social receptions was a dance at West Point. Here is where the first chapter begins and ends to be followed by two more.

Two Cadet Escorts Selected.

Brig. Gen. M. B. Stewart, superintendent of West Point, looked about for proper escorts for the princess.
He selected two cadets, both honor men in the class. One was Cadet Lieutenant William J. Glasgow of Washington, the other Cadet Captain Henry G. Douglas of Bel Air, Md. Glasgow is the manager of the army soccer team, while Douglas is the regimental supply officer.

Both are handsome. Glasgow is considered the Adonis of the academy.

It was evident it did not take the princess long to make her choice. And the first one to notice it was Douglas.
He danced with her once or twice tactfully, then retired gracefully to the background, leaving his classmate and friend a clear field.

After several dances with Cadet Glasgow, the princess herself suggested a retreat for fresh air and a view of the moon and the great palisades.
The evening, as in all fairy tales, came to an end all too soon, but when the princess shook hands warmly in farewell it did not mean goodbye.

Through all the 10,000-mile cross-country tour Ileana did not forget.
Two days before sailing she sufficiently overcame her timidity to ask Paul D. Cravath, who represented the queen in some threatened lawsuit for alleged breach of contract, to arrange for young Glasgow to come to New York to take luncheon with her.

A Princess Thwarted—Almost.

Mr. Cravath at once got in touch with General Stewart. Probably for the first time Ileana's wish was thwarted.

The commandant said "No!" but true to fairy-tale fashion, Ileana found a way. Could she come to West Point and have Mr. Glasgow take luncheon with her there? "Yes," said General Stewart, for even cadets favored by princesses must be allowed to eat some time.

And so the metaphorical "mountain" went to Mohammed. In ordinary prose, the meeting took place at the Thayer hotel, West Point. There were others present to satisfy convention, so young Douglas was invited also, but they merely lent a background to the winding up of a charming episode in the life of a beautiful princess.

Deaf Slander? Yes, Says Court, Recalling Omar

Paris.—Can the fast moving talking fingers of a deaf mute commit slander? This is a problem the police court at Bordeaux has been called upon to decide. Paraphrasing Omar Khayyam, the court ruled that "the moving fingers talk, and having talked," made slanderous remarks.
Following a violent quarrel in a cafe one deaf mute filed a charge of slander against another. Defendant pleaded there was no case to answer, since the law required that the slanderous statements must be uttered and heard.

Complainant insisted that the required effect could be perfectly well achieved by gestures accompanied by more or less articulate cries. Before the court both parties, without speech, argued their points so well that the judge had no difficulty in finding that slander could exist in pantomime.

New Bugs Unloosed to Fight Corn Borer

Chatham, Ont.—Exeristes roborator and Habrobracon brevicornis, two insects whose predatory habits are as formidable as their names, are being introduced by dominion entomologists to prey upon the European corn borer.
Resembling armored cockroaches and bearing deadly stingers, the foreign parasites are natural foes of the corn borer pest. They feed upon the larvae and adults of the borer, but so far as has been determined are harmless to crops.

Hordes of the insect warriors are being cultured and liberated at regular intervals.

The insects were imported from the corn-growing regions of Hungary, with the aid of the United States corn borer experiment station at Arlington Mass.

the Potsdam builders. It is 33 feet long and driven by two 200-horsepower motors.

BEAUTIFUL SNOW ARRIVED BEHIND TIME

Telephone and Traction Lines Were Badly Crippled by Sleet Storm.

The much sought for Christmas snow arrived late Christmas night. Jack Frost, like Santa Claus, hails from the far north. He gave Santa all day to celebrate and then chased him off the map. With the rain came sleet and all the trees and shrubbery were covered with an icy sheet. The lighted Christmas trees in the business district fairly scintillated with crystals and when the light hit the trees they looked beautiful in their icy raiment Sunday morning when the bright sun shone on them.

The evergreens in their iridescent colors formed by the sun's bright rays showed all colors of the spectrum and were indeed beautiful. This spectacle is seldom seen.

The icy mantle was not so beautiful for telephone lines. The Ohio Bell company and the Citizens company lines were put out of commission. The former had six hundred poles down and the latter some four hundred and all roads were practically impassible.

The traction line after 8:30 p. m. was completely knocked out and all cars were abandoned. Passengers who took cars at Columbus at 5:30 p. m., got as far as Reese station and were stalled for the rest of the night and passengers did not reach this city until 5:30 a. m., Sunday morning.

Evening Clothes for Men.

More than 20 years ago there was a play current, called "The Texas Steer" and save for the shooting scenes, the part that delighted youthful hearts most was when a raw Texan was grabbed by three companions and forced to wear a white collar against his will. The fight he put up to avert an adornment was worthy of the wildest Texas steer.

The old play comes to mind upon reading a Santa Fe, N. M., dispatch, wherein it is announced that governor-elect R. C. Dillon flatly refused to wear a full evening dress to the governor's inaugural ball on New Year's eve, in spite of the protests of the executive committee which has the arrangements in charge. To say that we sympathize with Mr. Collins and look upon him as a fraternity brother is putting it mildly. The "soup and fish" costume never did appeal to us, and that is not all.

A philosopher once said that he never in all his life saw a really great man. We can go him one better and remark that never in all our life have we seen a man who really looked well in a dress suit. And nine times out of ten it is not the dress suit's fault. It is not the dress suit's fault if knees are knocked, if legs are bowed and if the wearer, as is sometimes the case, is so short that his swallow tails dust the floor. Nor is it the dress suit's fault if it gives to some men that sombre appearance which reminds one of Poe's Raven or of a hungry crow on a cornfield fence.

The wearing of evening clothes on the part of men is a good deal like playing a violin. Nothing is more agonizing than to hear a violin badly played; nothing is more beautiful than to hear one well played. By the same token nothing is more becoming than a dress suit on a man whose physique is proportioned to a dress suit; but, land sakes, what is more terrible than a dress suit on a fellow whose shoulder blades and knee joints and feet look like plow shares! And strange to say the wearing of a dress suit on the part of homo sapiens is like man's claim to the possession of a sense of humor. All kinds and sorts of men think actually believe that they look well in dress suits. If some body would only tell—

What's that? No, we never wore one but once. We had a friend who was not backward about telling us the truth. Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.

Hunter's Green Faille for Afternoon Dress

Hunter's green faille makes this charming afternoon dress. It is trimmed with a band of dark green velvet around the waist and down the front. The ivory satin collar ties at the back of the neck.

New Models Distinctive in Both Color and Line

Callot always is very individual in taste, both with regard to the line and color schemes which she adopts. This year, however, the line of the dresses frequently corresponds with some of the tendencies decreed by fashion for the season. The chief points of similarity are to be found in the adoption of the straight skirt having only the one-sided fullness or else being widened by a loose panel placed in the center of the front. On the other hand, Callot firmly refuses to raise the waistline, to adopt the new blousing bodice or even to concede to the introduction of the bolero.

For sport wear there are a number of raglan coats and capes made in woolen fabrics and trimmed with matching bands of leather. These garments are very simple in line, but extremely well executed and, therefore, very elegant. Smarter still are the leather coats trimmed with fur, often forming a border of half the width of the skirt, which are intended for sport wear. Below both these types of coats are worn frocks made in natural colored kasha and trimmed with a wide leather belt. Some of these have the skirts formed of panels, below which are worn a pair of matching shorts; the frocks, which are generally worn below the leather coats, have a narrow and straight-folded overskirt.

The afternoon frocks of crepe often have straight bodices and plisse or gathered skirts and are trimmed with embroidery or gold galloons. The coats worn over them are quite straight or else rendered original by a full length complicated cape effect obtained by the employment of a different color or fabric. The satin models are quite straight and trimmed and widened either by a panel placed on the side or else by a characteristic Callot drapery found in the center. A very smart frock made in brown crepe georgette and bordered with narrow bands of kolinsky had a similar effect on the side cleverly obtained by the continuation of the straight skirt so as to make it form a point.

The evening dresses are either princess shaped slips entirely covered with a delicate embroidery or else chiffon frocks semi-robe de style in line having the skirts formed of outstanding flounces.

Flowers and Fruits to Brighten the Costume

Crystal flowers, fruits and berries, in clear and natural colorings, venture forth this season to brighten up costumes of all kinds, from the simple frocks suit to the very fluffy evening sports. In fruit clusters they are most attractive when seen hanging from the lapel of suit or topcoat. Then bunches of bright-colored berries are tucked in at the shoulder of an afternoon dress to lend just the right amount of chic.

The small bouquets, however, are used more indiscriminately, their selection being dependent on the color scheme. Other single flowers with foliage matching the bud or blossom successfully complete a bow of maline or tulle on an evening dress, or again give a perky air to a smart ensemble.

Cloth of Gold

An imported coat of black kasha is lined with cloth of gold and trimmed with stitching of very coarse black silk.

Necklaces of Woven Gold

Choker necklaces of woven gold wire fasten with a buckle and fit close to the throat.

Aviators Learned to Avoid Decoy Balloon

Life was full of surprises, mostly unpleasant, for the aviation forces during the World war, as related in the war diary of a young American flyer in Liberty. "For instance," he wrote, "There's a Hun balloon that's rather close to the lines. They always pull down the others when they see us coming, but they leave this one up. It looked like easy pickings and we asked the commander if we couldn't drop down and get it some time when the wind was with us strong. He said he'd investigate and that we'd better leave balloons alone until we were sent after them, because they were very dangerous toys.

"He got word from the brigade that this balloon is a dummy," the diarist further recorded, "and is there as a decoy. About four batteries have it ranged," he explained, "and instead of having a passenger basket, it's loaded with amonol, and as soon as some sucker dives on it, the Huns will explode it and that will be the last heard of him. . . . This is certainly a nice friendly little war."

AMUSEMENTS

"Kid Boots" brings a cast that has seldom been equalled to the Met theater today.

Starting with Eddie Cantor, the star and Clara Bow, Paramount has gathered a talented group of thespians, all of them remarkably well adapted to the screen version of Florence Ziegfeld's success. The play, you know, attracted capacity houses on Broadway for three years.

Cantor, ace of musical comedy comedians, makes his cinema debut in this picture. Clara Bow, due to triumphs in "Mantrap" and "The Runaway," now stands on the threshold of movie stardom. Billie Dove's fragile loveliness is almost idealistic. Handsome Lawrence Gray, formerly Gloria Swanson's leading man, finds himself admirably cast in a romantic role. Natalie Kingston's vampish beauty completes the trio of feminine pulchritude Paramount has lavished on "Kid Boots." Don't miss it!

Oriental Magnificence Motif for New Palace

The great wall of China, undoubtedly the greatest of all human structures and the ornate palaces of the Chinese emperors who prevailed in a civilization that was old long before Columbus discovered America, are architectural inspiration of a new motion picture palace of national distinction that is soon to be completed.

It is Grauman's Chinese Theatre and is being built at Hollywood Boulevard and Orchid street, the very center of the film capital of the world. It will have two entrances, one to the forecourt and one to the theatre proper. The forecourt entrance will be through a gate in walls that are forty-five feet high. And the entire forecourt is surrounded by these walls. The lower part of the walls will be lined with tanks built in replica of tropical seas and will be filled with varicolored fishes from the Southern waters.

Inside, the theatre will have an aisle which entirely surrounds the seats. It will be separated from the seats by columns of onyx seven feet in diameter and reaching from floor to high ceiling. Chinese rugs, porcelain, tapestries and other ornate objects from the Orient will complete the decorative scheme and it all will be coupled with the most recent developments of the theatre. The theatre is designed to give the premier performances and runs to each of the two or three greatest pictures of the year. The showman who is building it distinguished himself in the entire world of entertainment when he showed "The Covered Wagon" to three-quarters of a million persons in Los Angeles, a city of a million. Thousands of the patrons were from all over the United States and the world.

Nation's Champion Horses To Compete in February

Nancy Highland, horse shown in the above picture which last year gained the title of the best three gaited saddle horse in the United States is to be shown again this year with the severest competition imaginable at the Los Angeles Horse show, February 5 to 12. Nancy Highland won the national championship at the New York Show last year dethroning Bohemian Actress which had held the title for six years. The horse is owned by Maud Fawn Banks of Covina, California, and is trained and ridden by Roy Davis, shown riding.

The Los Angeles show is to have 110 classes with a total of $35,000 in prize money. This is more than ever awarded before in any show. It is to bring out the liveliest contest of them all when Edna May's King owned by Revel Lindsay English, and Easter Star owned by Marco Hellman, meet in the five gaited championship.

Easter Star won last year after the judges were obliged to keep the horses in the ring for twenty extra minutes to determine which was the better. Since that time Edna May's King has won the $10,000 stake at the Kentucky state fair. One of the horses will gain the distinction of being the best five gaited horse in the United States.

The 110 classes, which include five $2,000 stakes, will show a total of about 400 horses. More than 150 of these are from East of the Rocky Mountains.

Sister That Wasn't a Wall Flower

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

A YOUNG man and a young woman in evening dress stood in the shadows of the veranda of the brightly lighted country club.

"You've got to promise before you go in," said the young man rather sharply. "I'm certainly not going to let you carry on the way you did at the Bensons' last week."

"Well, I couldn't help it," protested the girl. "If the men are so foolish as to want to dance with me—why, it isn't my fault. I should think you'd be proud of having a sister that wasn't a wall flower."

"Well, I wasn't proud of the way you carried on—eight or nine men hanging around you all evening and a dozen girls sitting out every dance. So I'm telling you right now that unless you promise you won't dance at all so long as there are other girls sitting it out—promise you'll make the men dance with the wall flowers—promise you'll show more concern for the shy young fellows that can't dance very well and don't know the other girls, I'll take you right home."

"Oh, all right," said the girl, and with an indignant little toss of the head she went into the light that shone from the club house. Her brother followed.

Bob and Nancy Crane were comparatively newcomers in the neighborhood. This was the first time that they had attended one of the country club dances. Nancy was both very pretty and unusually fascinating—moreover she danced divinely. But through dance after dance that night she sat at one end of the rooms.

If the rejected young man ventured to sit down beside her she would keep the conversation general, sharing him with the girl or girls beside her. Sometimes she would suggest to a young man whom she had refused that he had better dance with one of the other girls not dancing, and it was only when she had contrived to find partners for all the wall flowers that she felt free to dance herself.

A tall, slender young man in faultless tuxedo seemed to have taken root among the wall flowers. Mr. Hill—Fred Hill—was his name. He had been brave enough to dance twice with enormous Sally Jones. Sally was a nice girl and rather jolly, but Sally weighed two hundred pounds and was not easy to dance with. Then Fred Hill had worried through a dance with a girl who said she had never danced but once before. Later he contrived to sit and talk through a dance with a girl who stammered—but said she didn't want to dance as she found conversation so much more worth while.

Once when Nancy had somehow contrived to provide the last wall flower with a partner Fred Hill wandered over to her, and, hardly looking at her, said in a tone of forced cheerfulness: "May I have this dance—I haven't been presented but that doesn't matter at this club." Then he looked at Nancy and realized how very pretty she really was.

"Funny little girl," Fred said to her after they had danced for a few minutes. "Sitting all alone with the wall flowers when you're the prettiest girl in the room—and the best dancer I ever met."

When this dance was over Fred asked Nancy to go out on the veranda with him, and Nancy accepted. After all, she thought, he wasn't particularly popular. He had been dancing with the wall flowers—didn't seem to know any of the popular girls. Bob had told her to be good to the shy men. After that she insisted on going back to the place of the wall flowers and at her bidding Fred danced with the girl who weighed two hundred and later talked with the girl who stammered. After that she felt that they both deserved a respite and they rambled down a path toward the golf course.

"Funny little girl," Fred was saying as he kissed her hand. "I feel as if I had known you always. I'm not going to let you forget me. I'm going to come and see you tomorrow—and the next day and the next day and every day after that."

"I'll tell you something funny," continued Fred. "My sister Alice and I have belonged to this club forever. I've been coming to dances all summer and there are always a number of very popular girls of the sort the men are always swarming around. Well, I've always been one of the swimmers. I never cared a rap for a girl who wasn't hotly pursued by at least a dozen other men. Well, my sister Alice told me that it was disgraceful—the way all the men hung round the few popular girls and a lot of really nice little girls had to sit out their dances. Alice made me promise tonight that I'd devote myself to the girl who didn't have so much attention. Well, I thought they were all hopeless. But Alice was right."

"Alice was very kind to make you dance with us," said Nancy simply. Fred was holding Nancy's little hand in his and bent and kissed it almost solemnly. "Blessed little wall flower," he said—"I love you."

The next day began an intensive sort of courtship and a week later Fred and Nancy were engaged.

"I told Fred the quiet little girls who weren't so very popular were really more worth while," Alice boasted. "And now he knows I was right."

Decrease Seen in Bovine TB.

Million "Reactors" Have Been Eliminated in Various Sections.

The Department of Agriculture, through the bureau of animal industry, has just announced that federal inspections show tuberculosis among cattle and swine has decreased generally. According to the report, since 1917 more than a million "reactors" to the bovine tuberculosis tests have been removed from the cattle of the United States. Because tuberculosis poultry have been infecting swine, the report says, fowl tuberculosis is now receiving special study.

Text of Announcement.

The full text of the announcement follows:

According to charts prepared in the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, bovine tuberculosis has shown a general decline since 1916, and tuberculosis of swine has decreased since 1924. The charts, which are based on records of federal meat inspection, cover a sufficiently large number of animals to be considered representative of conditions in the cattle and swine industries.

Though the improvement of the tuberculosis situation is shown, infection among cattle and swine received at federally inspected packing establishments is still rather extensive. Records for the fiscal year 1926 show that nearly 14 per cent of swine showed tuberculosis to some extent, though lesions were of a minor nature in a large proportion of the cases. The corresponding figure for cattle was 1.3 per cent for the same period. In 1916 about 2.3 per cent of cattle showed infection, 1 per cent more than last year. In 1924 about 15.2 per cent of the swine inspected were diseased. Reports from field workers indicate that the large extent of infection among swine is caused partly by tuberculous poultry. Accordingly, fowl tuberculosis has been receiving special study by tuberculosis-eradication officials.

Coincident with the decline of this disease among cattle and hogs, a decreasing human death rate from tuberculosis is shown by a recent report of the Department of Commerce. The low death rate of children under four years may be attributed in part to the aggressive campaign for testing tuberculous cattle and disposing of reactors. Since 1917, when the present tuberculosis campaign was undertaken, more than a million reactors have been removed from the cattle of the United States.

Better Soil Fertility by Using Rotation Plan

The Ohio experiment station has doubled the average acre yields on its farm during the last 25 years. For a number of years that institution has been getting an average of 70 bushels of corn, 30 bushels of wheat and 2.5 tons of clover hay per acre. These crops have been obtained on fields that have been in a three-year rotation for a quarter of a century, consisting of corn, wheat and clover. Prof. F. E. Bear of the soils department of that station says that not only must a rotation of that sort be faithfully carried out in order to obtain such yields, but that a lot of other things must be done as well. This is expressed in the following words: "The rotation must include clover and alfalfa or some other legume at least once every third year. The crops must all be fed or enough concentrates must be fed to compensate for the hay or grain sold. The barnyard must not leak. All liquids must be saved. Hot fermentation of the manure must be stopped. Acid phosphate must be used regularly. Limestone must be applied as required. Then high yields are guaranteed."

Straw Contains Much of Phosphorus and Potash

Straw contains a great deal of phosphorus and potash as well as organic matter. These are all essential materials for plant growth. Their continual destruction or loss through burning straw stacks will finally necessitate replacing them through commercial fertilizers—and commercial fertilizers are expensive.

The only time a straw stack should be burned is when it is full of weeds. In such cases more damage is often done by returning the weed seeds to the land than the benefit derived from the straw as a fertilizer.—Extension Service, Colorado Agricultural College.

FARM NOTES

If we plan ahead, we should never get far behind.

Sudan grass is the best nonlegume to use for hay pasture.

The formalin treatment for oat smut is well known to farmers and scarcely needs to be restated.

Crop rotation can be practiced usually with no outlay of money, whereas the use of commercial fertilizers requires an expenditure of money.

Cyanide gas reduces rat population in corn cribs, barns, etc., as quickly and effectively as anything yet discovered, recent trials in many Iowa counties indicate.

GOVERNMENT

COUNSEL

Owen Roberts and Atlee Pomerene Gave New Subpoenas to Disappearing Witnesses in Fall-Sinclair Conspiracy Case.

Washington, Dec. 23.—(UP.)—Government counsel Owen Roberts and Atlee Pomerene today planned Christmas presents for H. M. Blackmer and James O'Neill, missing witnesses in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy case, in the form of nice new subpoenas, served on them in their homes in France.

Efforts to obtain their testimony at the senate oil investigation and later in the civil oil trials were unsuccessful because of their absence from this country. Under a new law written by Senator Thomas Walsh, oil committee prosecutor, a $100,000 fine may be imposed on each witness if he refuses to appear before a consular court to give the evidence desired.

Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Stewart will leave January 7th for a trip through California and Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Harl Byers, of Lancaster, are holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Fisher.

$125,000,000 SPENT BY FRANCE ON BOBBED HAIR

If Amount Was Paid in Taxes to Government the Economic Problem Would Be Solved.

Paris.—If all the husbands of France were to pay in taxes to their government what it costs them annually to keep the heads of their better halves bobbed, shingled or clipped, then soon the expression, "governmental economies" would be banished from the political vocabulary of French ministers.

This happy prediction is made possible by bobbed hair statistics recently compiled in Paris to the effect that the annual income derived from bobbed haired madames in France by French hairdressers is little short of four billion francs (roughly speaking $125,000,000).

This amount is reached by allowing an average number of 24 haircuts and two permanent hair waves a year to a person.

Besides bobbing, female hair requires waving, and this estimate is based upon two permanent hair waves per annum, each wave being supposed to last from five to six months and costing from 150 to 500 francs, of which the average cost multiplied by two—one of each period of six months—is 650 francs per annum.

These two bills, one each for bobbing and waving, which do not include accessories such as shampoos, hair massages, or an occasional and discreet application of peroxide, when added together make the total cost of each bob reach 1,322 francs (about $40) per year and per person.

If only 3,000,000 women picked from the total French population of 40,000,000 souls—which is, indeed, a conservative estimate—each ask of and receive from their husbands the 1,322 francs or $40 annual income demanded by their respective coiffeurs, then France's annual contribution to the altar of beauty is at least 3,960,000,000 francs, or at 32 francs to the dollar, $124,562,000.

Nature's Law

There is no doubt that fishes feel, though they do not feel as acutely as we do. It is even asserted now that trees and flowers feel also, and that cauliflower have "death spasms." Nature seems to insist, by her strange process, that we shall exist at the expense of lesser things—but it is unlikely that a cauliflower's death spasm is very terrible. On the other hand, thoughtless anglers cause fish unnecessary suffering.

Use of Metal Ceiling

Goes Far Into Past

Very little has been written about metal ceilings. Nevertheless, metal ceilings and sidewalks fill an important place in the building finish of today. It is interesting to note, however, how they have come into use, says the Boston Herald.

Metal ceilings, we find in history, originated back to the time of King Solomon. At that time they used metals and hammered them into shape into panels, and from this ancient beginning the start of the metal ceiling industry has worked its way, until at the present time this form of interior finish is used in the highest class buildings throughout the world.

The old artists of ancient times wrought all their panel effects by hammering the metal into molds and various shapes, and as labor did not have the value of today it gave them a chance to lighten up their construction down through the building rather than put in stone panels with the subsequent heavy rich arch supports that were used before the time of steel girders.

Many of the fine old churches on the continent today have large panel ceilings fashioned out by these ancient workmen and they have withstood the test of hundreds upon hundreds of years.

The metal ceiling industry today has grown into such gigantic proportions that the most modern machinery and, in fact, the automobile body construction owes its entire start to the lessons learned from the metal ceiling manufacturers in stamping and pressing metal to various shapes.

Striving for Large Increases of Crops

Of Importance to Recognize Three Factors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is frequently pointed out by the bureau of soils of the United States Department of Agriculture that the nation will have to depend upon the cultivation of the soil for about one-third of its combined wheat, corn and oats produced; upon crop rotation for another third, and upon the use of manures and commercial fertilizers for the other third. It is logical that cultivation aids both rotation and fertilization, that rotation aids in rendering fertilizers more effective, and that fertilizers increase the value of rotation. Recent experiments in Illinois, however, bring out the fact that rotation and the use of fertilizers, when practiced together, may interact to the extent that their conjoint effects, as measured in terms of crop increases, may be not only equal to but greater than the sum of their separate effects.

The average yield of corn obtained without fertilizers and rotation in this particular experiment was 23.4 bushels per acre. The gain due to using fertilizers and lime was 9.2 bushels per acre, and the gain due to rotation alone was 27.8 bushels, or practically three times that obtained from the fertilizers and lime. The total increase effected by conjoint rotation and the use of fertilizers was 44.2 bushels per acre, or 7.2 bushels greater than the sum of their separate increases.

Other experiments have corroborated these results, which emphasize the importance of recognizing all three factors in striving for permanent soil productivity.

Ten Good Commandments for Successful Farmer

The following so-called ten commandments for the farmer, compiled from reports on an assignment to students in farm crops, Iowa State college, are interesting and contain a good deal of practical common sense:

1. Thou shalt have no other business before farming.
2. Thou shalt not deny thy farm lime, but give it manure, legumes and phosphorus, also.
3. Thou shalt not permit thy fields to scatter weeds and diseases to provoke thy neighbor's wrath.
4. Thou shalt keep a record of thy crops and thy flocks so that thou mayest know wherein thy profit lieth.
5. Thou shalt beware of the seed of strangers for thou knowest not what it may bring forth.
6. Thou shalt sow what the people desireth, for great is the reward thereof.
7. Thou shalt watch thy neighbor and procure for thine own fields those seeds which profiteth most in thine own community.
8. Thou shalt not permit thy seed to fall on poorly prepared ground, but be wise that thine efforts increaseth thy yields.
9. Thou shalt cast new seed upon thy pastures and disk them also that they may bring forth many fold.
10. When thou hast done all these things put thy trust in God, expecting a bountiful reward, for no man can do more.

Manure Should Be Taken Directly to the Fields

There is only one place where manure can be exposed to rains, and yet not lose its value. That is on the field. If the manure is comparatively free from noxious weed seeds, this is the very place for it, hauled and distributed direct from the barns, and if no field is ready for it, manure will benefit the pasture. While piling manure in the field puts the plant food there, it gives the spots that the pile covers, the major portion. I saw one wheat field where this method had been used and the wheat at the spots was much higher and a deeper green, says a writer in an exchange. Every farm should have a manure spreader ready to receive all the manure as taken out, and it should be under a shed.

Forest Trees Will Grow

Readily From Good Seed

Tree raising is not a long-time proposition as many people believe, according to Chester A. Lee, Extension Forester, Colorado Agricultural college.

"One can grow his own trees from seed. Seed of the ash, hackberry, box elder, honey locust, Russian olive, and the evergreens are now ripe. Before gathering a quantity of seeds, cut a few of them in two and see that they are full of 'meat.' Where a good percentage of the seed is sound, pick as many as desired and plant in accordance to the suggestions outlined for each species in 'The Farm Nursery for Forest Trees.'"

Cornstalks for Horses

The feeding of cornstalks to horses that are idle during the winter will probably not cause them definite injury although there is very little feed value to them. If you have a considerable amount of this product on hand feed one-half as much out straw as usual, making up the balance with the cornstalks. When spring time comes and you are ready to put your horses in condition for their season's work, the cornstalks and the straw should both be dropped and a good quality hay substituted for them.

CONTEST

For Lotta Crabtree's Estate Valued at $4,000,000 Brought Out a Knotty Legal Question.

Boston, Dec. 23.—(UP.)—Question as to the length of time a man must live with a woman before their relationship can be termed a marriage in public repute has been introduced in the closing days of the court battle for the right to contest the $4,000,000 will of the late Lotta Crabtree.

Mrs. Carlotta Crabtree, the plaintiff, claims relationships to the actress who once was the idol of Western mining camps. She contends she is the daughter of Jack Crabtree, brother of Lotta. Counsel for the estate have sought to show that Jack Crabtree had no daughter—that he never was ever legally married. Frederic M. Chase, state's attorney, declared in his closing argument that repute did not marry people, nor did cohabitation, nor the birth of a child.

"Take people living in their own communities all their lives," said Chase, "and no more proof is needed. But a man lives for a year with a woman reputed to be his wife. They go their ways and for 40 years they live apart. The weight of evidence is 40 to 1 against there having been a marriage.

Speaking of conditions in Tombstone, Ariz., when that city was a "wide-open mining camp," Chase said:

"Marriage was the exception rather than the rule in mining towns. There were decent people there, of course; but I venture to say that married people were in the minority.

Venerable Locomotive

One of the world's oldest locomotives, long famous in England as the Hetton colliery locomotive, has come to rest at last in a railway museum in York, after a triumphant tour of exhibitions. This veteran, in many respects resembling the world's first passenger engine, locomotive No. 1, was built in 1822, rebuilt in 1857 and again in 1882.

Ancient Almanacs

One of the oldest almanacs of the world is one dating from the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries, which is kept in the British Museum. Another is in Corpus Christi, Cambridge, England. Benjamin Franklin's Poor Richard's Almanac is one of the earliest published in the United States. It began in 1732.

In Time of No Choice

By DUFORD JENNE

"YOU poor, miserable little thing!" Beth said with smiling eyes. "I have a gorgeous plan for you. Now you shut up your little Puritan self in a handy closet and listen to me!"

Alice smiled faintly at her roommate, but it surely was a faint smile. A long month at a great city hospital that leaves one weary of life, without a position, and with savings gone does not make happy smiles; and Alice had reached that point, in spite of her cheery room-mate, who never let life get the best of her, where she was letting go.

"Ted's folks invited me to their place—after he died. He was a black sheep, you know, and when he married me, an ornery city girl with wild habits, that finished the both of us for them. So I never visited them. They never saw me and they never will, and I'm going to send you to them—under my name. In other words, you are to be for two precious weeks—Mrs. Edward B. Hale!"

"Oh! I never—it would be—" Alice objected.

"Listen! They never did a thing for Ted and me. They seemed to be sorry afterwards, but I don't forgive them. Then, you can't get me out among the cows and the crossroads. It's just right for you. You should never have come to the city, anyway," Beth rattled on. "I'll never go to see them. And you're just plain going to die, little one. You've got no choice!"

Too weak to argue, too weary to care much about the deception, dominated by the gay girl who took every challenge that life offered, at the end of the week Alice found herself speeding on the southern train to the home of the people to whom she was to be Mrs. Hale—the girl they had refused to accept, to whom now they would make redress.

More than once, Alice was in a panic of shame and doubt as she thought of the deception. The keenest moment of anguish came when, as she stepped from the train at the village station, a tall, smiling man of about her own age stepped up.

"Mrs. Hale? I am Alfred—Ted's brother. I'm to drive you home—and tell you that we are mighty glad to have you come," he said.

His smiling, friendly face stilled her fears, and before she knew it she was in his car, sweeping away into the country. She was silent, but he chatted along in his cheerful way, explaining gently how sorry his father had been for his sternness toward her and Ted, and added:

"Mother has been strong for you all the time, but dad rules the roost, and he's one of the old-fashioned, stiff-backed kind—up on his uppers one moment, then the next, sorry clean through. He'll try to make it up to you—and so will the rest of us!"

They did, without question, and Alice had reason to grieve over the deception many nights thereafter as she lay in the cozy upstairs best room with the wide peace of the country night about her.

One day Alfred looked at her oddly: "Beth, you were a little white ghost when you came, but you begin to look—well, you look mighty good to me," he suggested, his eyes merry.

Then he began to take her to happy times in the village and at different farms—dances, suppers, picnics—and after each came the long drives home through the fragrant, singing southern night; and a little slow ache began to form in her heart—she did not want to go back to the great city.

Then one night, as he went to the house with her after a joyous evening, he paused in the kitchen and pointed to a calendar.

"Beth, you see those little checks? I have been marking off the days you have left—and I—I wish I could get you to stay here always. I shall miss you," he said simply.

She trembled at the deep undertone of emotion in his voice, and her lips parted to form the words, "Oh, I wish I could"—then she remembered, and fled to her room.

The next morning, as she went downstairs, Alfred caught her arm, and his eyes were so tender and gentle, the tears almost came, but she said firmly: "Alfred, I want to tell you something—and your mother and father—I wasn't Ted's wife!"

He slipped an arm around her and, somehow, the touch of the firm arm was comforting.

"Little one, we have known it all along, for the real Beth wrote just after you came, the whole story. We didn't want to tell you we knew, and Beth didn't want to tell you she had written—and then mother and dad fell in love with you; then seeing that I did at the start; it seemed as if—" words eluded him, and he paused for a moment. "All I know or care is—I love you, and if you think you could be happy with me, I don't want you to go back—ever!"

A sweet sense of happiness closed about her, and out of it she spoke in a whisper: "And I don't want to go back, ever—for I love you!"

Deadliest of Hawk Tribe

The goshawk is the fiercest of all the hawk tribe and is blamed by conservationists, in a great measure, for the growing scarcity of game. It is claimed that the species, whose habitat is largely in the North, where its favorite quarry is the snowshoe hare, comes to the temperate zone in great numbers only when there is a scarcity of food in the North.

Emblem of Longevity

The stork, when woven in China rugs, is the emblem of longevity. The stork was thought to live to a fabulous age; at 600 years, being too old to only drink, and turned blind after 1,000 or 2,000 years. A blue stork in the design of the rug is particularly significant.
